Good wine ☞ from a good company ☞

This portfolio is a culmination of many years of research, learning and building relationships within the wine community. We champion fine wines that have a true sense of place, from growers in the world's great regions.

As a young company we embrace new ways of working while understanding that the nature of wine means face-to-face, human interactions and outstanding customer service are paramount to ours and your success. We are working hard to ensure our brand values aligned with our supply partners and customers alike and that they are etched into all that we do.

We combine our customer-first mindset with a deep understanding of our wines and producers, knowledge of our markets and a thirst for continuous learning and improvement.

Our goal is to positively influence our industry by scrutinising our entire supply chain – from vineyard to table – to alleviate pressure on our planet.

Whisson Lake

In 1985 Mark Whisson chose one of the steepest and highest altitude sites in the Adelaide Hills' Piccadilly Valley exclusively to plant Pinot Noir. Whisson Lake now stands as South Australia's most coveted producer of fine Pinot, delivering wines of nuance, structure and finesse. Widely regarded for their reds, the estate also produces an outstanding 'Gris de Noir' (white Pinot Noir) in cool vintages.

Obsessed with site expression, Tarrant Hansen has quietly made a name for his label as a hidden gem within the Adelaide Hills. Hansen's background in medicine is evident in his millimetre perfect approach to growing and production of both classic Adelaide Hills wine as well as more exotic varieties from Italy. Of particular note, his Chardonnay expressions are some of the 'Hill's finest.

Since his first overseas vintage in Tuscany, Sam Scott has been obsessed with the production of Italian varieties in Australia. Using a combination of traditional European winemaking techniques; long maceration and no additions, and new-world tech, Scott's wines show the suitability of these Italian grapes to the Australian landscape and show an ethereal quality seldom found in wines of this value.

Sven Joschke

Heavily influenced by new-wave European styles – especially the crisp reds and whites of the Jura where he worked alongside Marin Fumey of Fumey–Chatelain – these are contemporary (predominantly) Barossa bottling of real elegance. Not feeling the need to confine his range to one region, in true negociant style Sven seeks fruit from the cooler Adelaide Hills, Langhorne Creek and even the Jura itself for a very special oxidative white in some vintages.

Ca'Rome'

Giuseppe and Paola Marengo produce perhaps the truest expression of micro-terroir wines, producing fine Nebbiolo from Rio Sordo in Barbaresco and Cerretta in Barolo. The wines of this tiny estate showcase the unique characteristics not only of single cru, but of specific parts of their respective vineyards.

From relative obscurity only a decade ago, Walter Bera's family winery has become a leading producer of fine Langhe wines, with their headline vineyards in Barolo and Barbaresco now among the regions most sought after. Careful management between their cuvees within the cellar results in wines of depth and a complexity belying their modest pricing.

Maria Luisa Marchetti

Over the last 20 years, Maria-Luisa Marchetti has been dedicated to the organic cultivation and minimalist vinification of Nebbiolo in Valtellina. A micro estate in the truest sense, Marchetti tends a meagre 1ha of vineyard in the region's far eastern Valgella. Despite their tiny vineyard holding, the aromatic and layered cuvees from here are quietly developing a cult status.
